and Himalayan rivers for transfer of water from surplus basins to water deficit basins.

The Government is conscious of the need to ensure for efficient use of water for agriculture, which in essence is an integral part of sustainable development of agriculture as enshrined in the National Policy on Agriculture. Efforts aimed at diversification of agriculture constitute an important initiative in this direction, because this would facilitate the much-needed shift from the rice-wheat system in areas suffering from the stress on ground water resources. Further, priority is accorded to the holistic and sustainable development of semi-arid rainfed areas through integrated watershed development approach in which the construction of micro irrigation facilities like water harvesting structures, village ponds, check dams, etc. are promoted.
